

Dr. Pound's House

Dr. Pound's House - Dripping Springs, Texas

Dr. Joseph Pound

The Pound, Wallace, and Moss families settled in Dripping Springs. The Pound House was the first and is the oldest building in Dripping Springs. Dr. Pound built it in 1853. It was made of local materials found in the area.

Dripping Springs Academy

It was built in 1881 and W.M. Jordan was the founder. It was the first school in Dripping Springs. In 1883 it was given to the Baptist association. In 1889 it was a public school. In 1952 it became the Masonic Lodge, which it still is today.

Marshall-Chapman Home

Burrell Marshall completed this lumber home in 1871. He used the home as a post office when he was a postmaster. When he died in 1872, his widow married William Chapman. It can be found on Mercer Street.

Dripping Springs Milkhouse

Milk House Springs—Dripping Springs, Texas

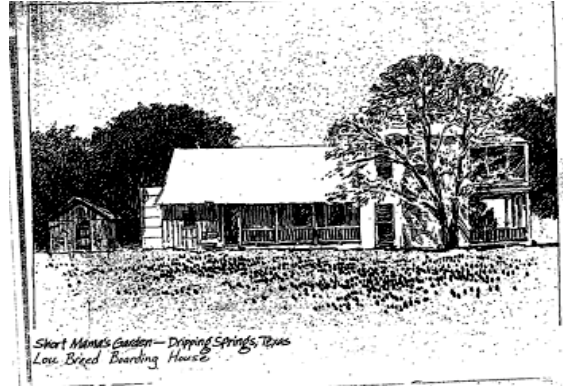

Sarah Pound discovered the dripping springs and it inspired her to name the new town Dripping Springs. They are located under the bridge of Main Street. The settlers used the springs for water and to keep their milk cool. The springs have not run for at least five years.

A.L. Davis-Chapman Store

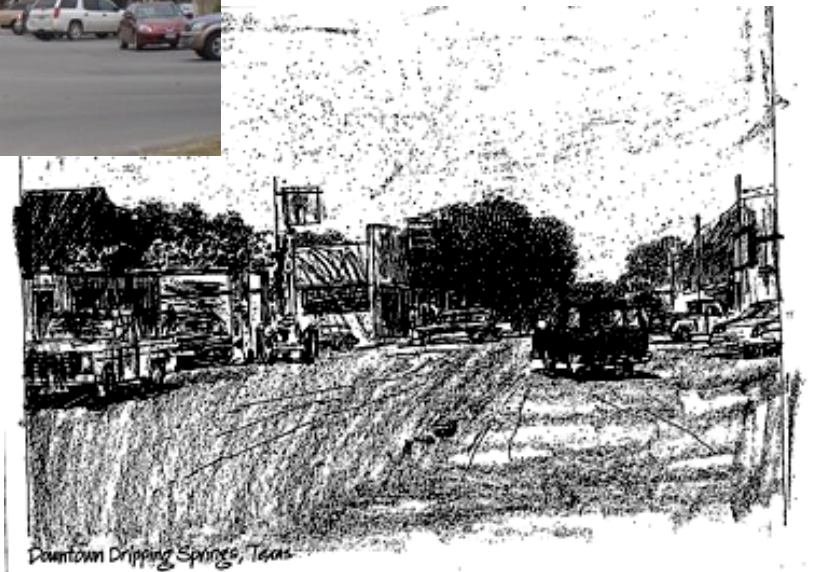

It was built in 1891. It has served many purposes such as a grocery store, a church, a meeting hall, an antique store, a post-office, and a hardware store. In 1952 the upstairs burned down and it was never rebuilt. Today, it is a gift shop.

Short-Mama's House

Beulah Crumley Hayden "short mama," was the innkeeper for this boarding house. She lived here until 1989 when she passed away at the age of 97.

Mercer Street/Downtown Dripping Springs

In 1881 Dripping Springs was officially born when Chapman created the 12 block Mercer St. plan. This is the main street in Dripping Springs. Travelers used Mercer St. to get through town.

Spaw Barbershop and Post Office

Owned by Johnny and Mary Spaw.
This was both a post office and barbershop.

Rinkey Dink Domino Hall

This building was funded through paying as you play. 25 cents here and there until it was repaid. It is found in the Alley.